Ms. Stein hails from the New York City borough of Queens ("the World's Borough"), the most diverse county in the United States. She earned her A.B. degree in International Relations (focusing on U.S.-Latin American Affairs) from Stanford University. While at Stanford, she studied "Comparative Aspects of Anglo-American Law and Society" in Great Britain, and lived with a family in Guadalajara, Mexico, while studying Spanish. In addition to family law, Ms. Stein has practiced aviation litigation (products liability), redevelopment law and general civil litigation.

Every fall you will find her rowing around Manhattan Island to raise money for Rocking the Boat, a youth development organization which uses wooden boat building to engage high school students in the South Bronx.
